Fulfilling the Rights of Others

Summary points of Address at the Final Session of Jalsa Salana UK 2021 by His Holiness, Hazrat Mirza Masroor Ahmad^(aba)

- His Holiness said that we have no need to adhere to the standards of rights which are set by worldly people, nor do we need to be defensive about our teachings. Rather, we should propagate our teachings of honouring the rights of others, so that true peace and harmony can come about in society.
- It is true, that the rights of society cannot be honoured until and unless it is accepted that there is One Creator of this universe, there is none worthy of worship except Him, and no partners should be associated with him. When this is done, and true belief in God is established, then the world can move towards establishing true peace.

The Rights of Friends

- Islam teaches to honour the rights of friends.
- One should befriend those who are pure of heart, and then honour that friendship.
- God Almighty has included friends in the sphere of close relatives, showing thereby the manner and care with which they should be treated.
- Islam teaches to honour friendship for the sake of God.
- Islam also teaches that friends should not be upset with each other and refrain from speaking with one another for more than three days.
- Islam teaches that one should also uphold the friendships of their parents, even after they have passed away.
- The Promised Messiah^(as) who likened his care for friends to a body which, when experiencing pain in one part, experiences pain throughout the body.

The Rights of the Sick

- Islam has enjoined fasting for Muslims, but has established rights for those who are ill.
- Islam has established the rights of those who are ill and exempted them from fasting, so long as they are ill, and until their health is restored.
- Islam also teaches to fulfil the desires of those who are ill.
- Islam also teaches that there is a great reward for those who visit the ill, thus advocates rights of ill.
- One of the five rights which one Muslim has over the other as per Holy Prophet^(sa) is to visit the ill.

Taking Care of Orphans

- Islam has also established the rights of orphans.
- Islam says that if one is able, they should spend out of their own pocket to care for orphans, and if they are unable to do so, then they should be extremely deliberate in their spending from the wealth of orphans.
- Islam says that when an orphan reaches the age of maturity, their wealth should be given to them.
- Islam warns that there is punishment for one who does not honour and respect orphans.

- Once the Holy Prophet ^(sa) joined his index and middle finger together and said that one who takes care of orphans will be as close to him in heaven as the two fingers joined together.
- The Holy Prophet ^(sa) also warned that one who does not fulfil the rights of orphans and women should fear the wrath of Allah.
- The Holy Prophet ^(sa) said that the reward of one who takes care of three orphans will be equivalent to the reward of a person who stays up all night in prayer, fasts during the night, and strives in the way of Allah.
- One should take care of orphans and the needy, and do so not for their own benefit or gain, but only to attain the pleasure of Allah Almighty.

Rights of Oaths

- Islam also teaches to uphold and fulfil oaths, thereby establishing the rights of oaths.
- one of the qualities of righteous people is to uphold and fulfil oaths.
- The Holy Prophet ^(sa) said that one who breaks their oath, he would be at odds with them on the Day of Judgement.
- His Holiness ^(aba) said that there is the famous incident at the time of the Treaty of Hudaibiyah, which took place even before the treaty had been completed. One of the conditions was that if any person fled from Makkah to the Holy Prophet ^(sa), they would be returned to Makkah. As the treaty was being written, a Muslim who had fled from Makkah and the persecution he faced there and came to the Holy Prophet ^(sa) requesting to remain with him. However, the Holy Prophet ^(sa) said that he could not allow him to stay. He said that even though the treaty had not yet been signed, the condition had been written down, and so he honoured this oath.

Rights of Others During Wartime

- Islam has also established the rights of those at war.
- Islam gives permission to fight, it is only and solely for the purpose of establishing peace and religious freedom.
- Whenever the Holy Prophet ^(sa) appointed a general or commander, he would advise them to act with righteousness, to be fair and just, to not transgress and, if the opponents lay down their arms and cooperate, to cease fighting.
- It is recorded that the Holy Prophet ^(sa) would enjoin any envoy departing that they should strive to establish compassion, and should not level an attack until they have first invited the opposing party to peace. He would also instruct that no children, women or elderly people should be harmed.
- Even at times of war, Islam has established the rights of opponents.
- Islam forbids Muslims from mutilating or humiliating the bodies of those opponents killed in battle.
- Muslims are instructed not to act deceitfully in battle.
- Women, children and elders should not be harmed.
- When going into another city or country for battle, the residents and citizens should not be harmed or terrorised.
- Prisoners should be tended and cared for and given the same things to eat and wear as one eats and wears themselves.
- Similarly, Islam teaches not to destroy buildings, or cut down fruit-bearing trees.

His Holiness ^(aba) said that these are only a few rights which he mentioned. If these rights are upheld, then true peace and harmony can be established in the world. However, if the world neglects the fulfilment of these rights, then the world should prepare for a global war. His Holiness ^(aba) said that we must pray for the world to avoid such destruction, and that humankind may be able to recognise the One, True God. His Holiness ^(aba) prayed that may all Ahmadis remain safe and be saved from any and all hardships.
